BUBONIC PLAGUE

Transmitted by Fleas That Have Bitten Plague Infected Rats.

It is a remarkable fact, confirmed by many observations, that many physicians who have devoted considerable labor to the study of a particular disease have themselves died of that disease.

One of the most interesting examples is that of John Daniel Major, born August 16, 1834, in Breslau, a physician and naturalist of no mean ability. Bitten early by the wanderlust, he studied at Wittenburg, took courses at many of the schools in Germany, and finally went to Italy where he received the degree of doctor of medicine at Padua in 1660.

This is the reverse side of the Prince Albert tidy red tin. Read this "Patented Process" message-to-you and realize what it means in making Prince Albert so much to your liking.

Returning to his own country, he resided for a short time in Silesia and in 1661 married at Wittenburg, Margaret Dorothy, a daughter of the celebrated Sennert. The following year, his young wife was stricken with plague and died after an illness of eight days. Distracted by his loss, Major wandered up and down Europe studying plague wherever he found it in the hope that he might discover a cure for the disease which had bereaved him.

He settled in 1665 in Kiel, where he was made professor of botany and the director of the botanical gardens. He made frequent voyages, however, always in quest of the remedy for plague. Finally in 1693, he was called to Stockholm to treat the queen of Charles the Eleventh, then ill with plague. But before he could render her any service, he contracted the disease and died on the third of August.

The bubonic plague of today is identical with the black death of the Middle Ages. Primarily a disease of rodents caused by a short dumb-bell shaped microscopic vegetable, the pest bacillus, it occurs in man in three forms; the pneumonic, which has a death rate of almost 100 per cent; the septicaemic, which is nearly as fatal, and the bubonic in which even with the most modern methods of treatment the mortality is about 50 per cent. It is a disease of commerce, spreading around the globe in the body of the ship borne rat.

HE COULD HARDLY WALK.

Deranged kidneys cause rheumatism, aches, pains, soreness, stiffness. Ambrose Gary, Sulphur, Okla., writes: "I was bothered with kidney trouble ten years and at times could hardly walk. I began taking Foley Kidney Pills. I got relief from the first but continued till I had taken three bottles. I feel like a new man." For sale by Reed & Burnett.

It is estimated that every case of human plague costs the municipality in which it occurs at least $7,500. This does not take into account the enormous loss due to disastrous quarantines and the commercial paralysis which the fear of the disease so frequently produces.

The disease is now treated by a serum discovered through the genius of Yersin. This is used in much the same way as is diphtheria antitoxin.

HOW TRANSMITTED.

Plague is transferred from the sick rodent to the well man by fleas. The sick rat has enormous numbers of plague bacilli in its blood. The blood is taken by the flea which leaving the sick rat seeks refuge and sustenance on the body of a human being to whom it transfers the infection.

METHOD OF PREVENTION.

Since plague is a disease of rodents and since it is carried from sick rodent's to well men by rodent fleas, safety from the disease lies in the exclusion of rodents not only exclusion from the habitation of man but also from the ports and cities of the world. Those who dwell in rat-proof surroundings take no plague. Not only should man dwell in rat-proof surroundings but he should also live in rat-free surroundings.

The day is past when the rodent served a useful purpose as the unpaid city scavenger. Rats will not come where there is no food for them. Municipal cleanliness may be regarded as a partial insurance against plague. The prayer that no plague come nigh our dwelling is best answered, however by rat-proofing the habitations of man.

Modern sanitary science has evolved a simple and efficient weapon against the pestilence which walketh in darkness and striketh at noonday, and the U. S. Public Health Service has put this knowledge into practical operation and thus speedily eradicated plague wherever it has appeared in the United States.—Public Health Service.

INCREASED CORN CROP

Crimson Clover Turned Under Produced 35 Bushels Where 9 Grew Before.

I can take any land in my community and sow it to crimson clover, let it get ripe in the spring, strip the seed, and sell the seed for as much as the corn would bring, raised without clover. Then turn the clover under and plant to corn by June 10 and make twice as much corn as the same land would make without clover.

I have a piece of land, about one acre, that was planted in corn four years ago without clover. It made about nine bushels of corn. Two years ago I planted the same land to corn after turning under the first crop of crimson clover that ever grew on the land and it made thirty-five bushels of corn that year. The same land is in corn now after turning under a crop of clover from which I stripped a wagon bed two feet deep and eleven feet long tramped in full of seed. I have saved my seed and some to sell for the last two years, and want to say that the clover stripper is the greatest machine on my place. I can save twice as much seed with it as I can mowing and threshing with a clover huller.—R. A. Hunnicutt, in the Progressive Farmer.
